Jaime Sisto balances world travel with the bounty of home.

Name a country anywhere in the world and chances are Jaime Sisto has been there, developing new economic opportunities for Ohio. In fact, after working in more than 40 countries as an economic development attorney and the former international trade director for two Ohio governors, he's lost count of the places he's traveled.

Today, Jaime continues to strengthen Ohio's growth nationally and internationally as the president of Value Recovery Group. In addition to a talented workforce, Jaime attributes Ohio's success in the global marketplace to partnerships with companies like AEP Ohio that share his business's stake in the state's economic vitality. The preferred energy partner provides affordable and reliable electricity, helping thousands of local businesses, like Jaime's, prosper and compete.

At the heart of Jaime's globetrotting public and private service is his enthusiasm for building upon all that Ohio has provided his family. "I live within a few minutes of where I work, shop and play, and my family surrounds me, because they've found the right opportunities to keep them happy and successful here."

Although golf and hiking are high on Jaime's list of favorite things to do, his time with family wins the top spot. In particular, Jaime and his wife like to cook. "One of the great things about living in Ohio is that I can leave work, stop off at one of my favorite markets for fresh local produce and be home cooking with my wife in less than an hour. What other metropolis can you do that in? To me, that's the meaning of the State of Perfect Balance."

"We can compete internationally because life in Ohio attracts very talented people – and keeps them here."
